Bolivia to Elect New Government

LA PAZ, Bolivia, (AP)—A final compromise quiet, voters of the Andean republic will elect tomorrow's government Sunday. The replacement junta which ruled since the bloody revolution of July 23, 1946, in which former president Gualberto Villarroel was hanged from a gallows in front of the presidential palace.

Although the junta, headed by Juan O'Leary, president of the district court of La Paz (the supreme court of Bolivia), has said the election will be the most honest in the history of the country, no party already has changed the government with partiality.

Voters will choose between four presidential candidates—one of whom, Victor Paz Estenssoro, chief of the National Revolutionary movement, was ousted by the military in the ousted Villarroel regime, now living in exile in Buenos Aires. Although the National Revolutionary movement, which supported Villarroel, has a majority in the last constituent assembly elected in 1946, the military has refused to allow Enrique Huidobro, chief cabinet minister, and Luis Ferrando Chuchalla, former Bolivian minister in Washington.

Fourth candidate is Gen. Felix Tena, former chief of staff of the Bolivian army, who is supported by the Democratic Workers party.

Britain Plans Cut In Civil Service

LONDON.—Britain's top-level wartime civil service will be "substantially reduced" after the war, a major department has announced.

Department heads Saturday received a letter from the prime minister, Sir Winston Churchill, outlining a plan whereby an initial cut in strength would be made next month. The service is now 700,000 strong—more than twice the number of the pre-war. Ministers have been instructed to make the cuts in the most efficient manner possible, while maintaining the services required to administer the government in Whitehall, which has been reduced to a skeleton staff. The salaries and expenses bill for the civil service is estimated at £100 million a year.

It is to be left to the head of each department to estimate the number of staff he needs. Mr. Churchill has asked that the number of staff in each department be reduced to the minimum necessary to run the government. The number of staff in each department is to be reduced to the minimum necessary to run the government. # IS HOW RUSSIA REALLY LIVES?

Children of Russia—Their Early Years And Education

The CHILDREN

Until 1944, Soviet children went to school at eight, but the age has now been reduced to seven. There are kindergartens for the younger children and creches for the babies.

THESE ALWAYS seem to be in the charge of people who are fond of the children and who are taught singing and dancing games and simple recreation.

They always seem to enjoy this, but they do not sing more melodiously than children of the same age in other countries.

The atmosphere is clean, but not unreasonably antiseptic.

The moral education of the children is taken very seriously, and they are brought up to believe that all good things come from Communism.

THE SLOGAN, "We thank Stalin for our happy childhood," is everywhere. In fact, the current mottoes are, in my mind, crammed down the children's throats too much.

The school-leaving age is subject to various exceptions and rules, and I have never found out to my own satisfaction what the minimum schooling is.

But, arriving upheaval — such as those caused by the war — has meant that the majority of children in the Soviet Union receive elementary education in the three R's and a smattering of something more.

In many of the villages, there is only four years' schooling, but this does not necessarily mean that the children's education is poor, for often they go on to a boarding school at a higher centre.

MOST CHILDREN receive a secondary education, and large numbers receive the full ten years' education, which finishes at 17.

Those who leave school early often receive further instruction at the technical schools attached to factories.

Soviet children are, on the whole, keener to learn than ours: under the czar learning was hard to come by, and they still regard it as a privilege to be allowed to learn.

A LOT OF TIME is given to science — also to poetry and literature.

The teaching years to quality. The standard is certainly no higher, and perhaps lower, than in our secondary and elementary schools, but the remarkable thing is how much teaching there is.

When it was decided after the revolution, to educate the whole population there was an acute shortage of teachers, and without any particular training were often pressed into the profession, and the best pupils often stayed on as teachers or even taught younger children when they themselves were learning.

There are now many training colleges which turn out fully qualified teachers. But the supply has not yet caught up with the demand, so that the Soviet Union suffers from classes that are too large — even more than we do here.

THERE IS ALSO a great shortage of school buildings and one often finds, for instance, that the younger children are taught in the mornings and the older in the afternoons. School books and writing materials were so short during the war that some schools were reduced to learning by rote.

Boys and girls are taught together at the elementary schools, but since 1944 they have been separated for lessons at the secondary schools, though they again play and games. This change is approved by both teachers and parents; it makes for better discipline.

IN THE EARLY YEARS of Soviet rule, many revolutionaries expected to build a new heaven and a new earth. The older generation tended to be against the Bolsheviks, and did everything they could to break the power of parents over their children.

The family was regarded as a bourgeois institution which was hostile to the revolution, and marriage was thought to be no use, but the husband and wife, in school, too, the encouragement of the younger generation seemed to lead to fantastic lengths, and children would solemnly sit in judgment on their teachers.

But as the revolution settled down into a state system, the need for discipline was felt ever more strongly, and nowadays Soviet schoolchildren are expected to obey their teachers at least as much as in other countries and are taught the same standards of school behaviour.

YOUTH CLUBS

When the children reach school age they join the Pioneers—a sort of Boy Scout, Girl Guide organization.

In each town there are "houses of the Pioneers," and in the big towns and cities there are always a central "palace of Pioneers" where the children go out of school hours for informal instruction in whatever happens to interest them, and for collective activities such as plays, dancing, music and recreation.

ONE OF THE BEST BOYS of the town is always chosen for the purpose. In Tiflis it is the former child of the czar's valet in the Caucasus.

John Lawrence, in his third article in This Edmonton Bulletin on "This Is How Russia Really Lives," today draws an intimate and revealing picture of the children of the Soviet Union. Lawrence, unbiased by any Russian-inspired propaganda, discusses frankly their early training; the attitude and methods of their instructors; and compares the Soviet educational system with those of other lands. He lays stress on the moral education of the children and finds that while they are happy and enjoy their kindergarten activities, such reaction is no more pronounced than in other lands. Lawrence, who was British Press Attaché in Moscow between 1942 and 1945 also deals extensively with youth clubs, universities and religion in today's article.

RELIGION

Religion is rigidly excluded from the schools and universities, though the Church of works as well as of faith. The State, however, is no longer an atheistic power.

There is very little part in the lives of the intelligentsia, but there is still much simple faith among the masses in the countryside.

ON ANOTHER occasion I attended a meeting of the "history club" of the Moscow Palace of the Soviets. There were nine boys and girls, and their job had been to inspect the public statues in Moscow and to find out about the people they represented.

Afterwards I asked them to tell me what I should read myself about the period of the revolution. The answer, given by a small boy, was:

"OF COURSE, the best general account is in Khrushchev, but this is not rather out of date. If you want to go into more detail you would have to read Solovov, and you must look up the original correspondence between Ivan and Prince Kurbsky. The latest view of Soviet historians is in Vipper's book."

The conception of these children had been given of history was very different from what an up-to-date teacher would give in Britain. Economic factors and class conflicts were stressed, but it was not hard to say that they were over-stressed. The children were proud of the revolution, of our Moscow State.

UNIVERSITIES

After leaving school a big proportion of the young people go on to higher education. There are 36 universities—run more or less on Western lines—which have about 30,000 students.

Still larger numbers go to the industrial institutes and other technical colleges, which though they do not give degrees, educate their students up to what we should consider a good university standard.

ALREADY IN 1940 there were 782 "higher educational institutions" with 36,000 students. It is now planned to train 120,000 new "specialists" up to university standard every year ("specialists" include most of what we would call the liberal professions).

In 1940 there were 152 institutions training industrial students. The "industrial institutes" probably turn out more of the future rulers of Russia than any other organization in the Soviet Union. The Institute at Sverdlovsk is a residential university of engineering comparable in size with Oxford and Cambridge.

I liked what I saw of the students and their teachers. The students of the Ural and Siberia are somewhat tougher and more outspoken than the Moscowites; it is rather like the difference between London and the North.

THE GIRLS GO IN for much the same subjects as the men, but they are more likely to include a number who are studying heavy engineering.

I do not think this is due to any difference in female human nature, but simply to the fact that in the Soviet Union the need for trained people is so great that there is no time for sex prejudice. If a girl is a qualified heavy engineer she gets the job—and keeps it.

One of the best things about Soviet universities is that it is possible for an older person to take a degree, and this helps him to move up in his career. It is hard work in addition to earning one's living, but it is surprising how many people do it.

The tremendous number of young people who receive higher education is the best indication of the aims which the Soviet Union has for its future. The Government's training has high priority in Soviet plans and there can be little doubt that the Government intend to achieve a rate of all-round progress never yet achieved.

THE YOUNG MEN and women who come out of the Soviet Institutes of Higher Education are usually well grounded in their studies, alert, public spirited and modern. They are now the mainstay in the future of the Russian people when officials and red tape brought are used to despair.

had been reading an historical novel about Joseph in Egypt. She told me the story as if it was the latest novel, and was rather impatient when I said that in our country everyone was taught these stories.

THE PRACTICE of religion, on the other hand, is freely permitted. A secretary for priests is being started for the first time since the revolution, and the Patriarch of Moscow has been given considerable quarters in the former German embassy. The activities of the Russian Church receive publicity abroad, but very little at home.

Religion is not publicly attacked. The only form of what could possibly be called anti-religious propaganda is the public lectures which are organized in all big towns on elementary natural science.

The subject-matter is always marshalled in such a way as to suggest a materialistic explanation of the universe. Young Soviet citizens often assume, in the rather naive manner of the 1880's, that these Darwin lectures have been given to show that the universe holds no miracle.

CHRISTMAS trees mean as much to Russian children as they do to ours. They light them with candles and hang them with toys just as we do. Every kindergarten has its Christmas tree, and parents do their best to arrange something at home.

And then there are the public Christmas trees in the Central House of the Trade Unions every year, where there is a sort of standing children's party which goes on for weeks on end.

Some of the nice Christmas trees I have seen were in homes for orphans. These homes are excellently run, and everything is done to make up to the children what they miss in home life.

THE HOME which I knew the children were in was a home for the children, who were in the orphanage, was said to neglect the teaching in favour of creating a home atmosphere.

HE WAS REMOVED and given a different job — quite an important one — and replaced by an able man of the regular school-leaver type who perhaps looked too far in the opposite direction. Soviet Christmas trees are not produced for Christmas but for the New Year, and everything is done to make the children forget any religious associations.

Once I heard some tiny children at an orphanage singing a sweet little song about the Christmas tree and how it had come from the collective farm and other pious Communist sentiments.

Famous Lady Boats Returning to Peacetime Service

When the Lady Rodney docked at Halifax recently with nearly 200 Canadian servicemen's wives and children from overseas, she brought to a close more than four-and-a-half years' war service. The Lady Rodney was immediately turned back to the Canadian National Steamship Lines by the Department of National Defence.

Taken over by the government in June, 1945, the former C.N.S. peacetime luxury cruiser to the West Indies became a troop ship. Since that time she has travelled almost 70,000 miles between Canada, Newfoundland and Labrador and the United Kingdom and in several trips between England, Rotterdam and Antwerp carrying servicemen overseas and after VE-day in repatriation service. Much of it was done when German submarines were desperately trying to choke off the flow of men and munitions going overseas. The Lady Rodney carried about 67,000 persons in this service. Except for approximately 2,000 dependents, all were servicemen.

The Lady Rodney is the last of her kind to be returned to the company. In March, 1942, while in the C.N.S. West Indies service, she was torpedoed and badly damaged in the port of Antwerp. She was returned to service as Canada's first "troop ship" in April, 1943, just before the Canadian forces went into action in Sicily. She has since carried 25,000 soldiers, Canadian, English and other European troops. She carried 25,000 passengers, with the exception of about 1,000 dependents, were sick and wounded servicemen.

The Lady Rodney went directly into drydock for reconstruction to carry passengers and freight traffic. When work on the ship was completed in late February or early March, 1947, they will be sent to the West Indies run. Sailing from Halifax on the last mile of her long war service, on behalf of a large group of Dutch war

Raps Conditions Urges Dignity For Teaching Profession

Minus the customary stage but with words which rang with urgency, Winston Churchill, at Edmonton Friday, sounded a rallying cry to the teaching profession of this province to place their calling on the same plane of dignity as that in other professions such as medicine, law and dentistry.

FROM CALGARY, Mr. Churchill came to the city to attend the emergency meeting of school district councillors, 200 of whom met in session at the Masonic Temple.

He seconded conditions which had led to the deterioration of the teaching profession in general, observing that the professions he mentioned, while beginning on a modest salary, were adequately organized to command comfortable living returns after opening their practices. They remained in their work from 25 to 45 years or longer and considered it a life calling.

HE CITED the recent strike of leverage workers in Calgary in which they were enabled to receive a pay increase and an hours agreement.

Although the same methods were not being employed at the teachers' protest meeting in Edmonton, it amounted to the same thing, he indicated, saying that 25 to 30 per cent of the province's teachers were dropping out of the profession each year.

"I contend that the duties of a teacher in society are as important—at least from the social point of view—as those of any other profession," declared Mr. Churchill.

TEACHERS, THROUGH their own organizations and other progressive agencies, should advance the undeniable truth that the profession which they represent is as important to society, and pay for it more so, than any of the others, since future citizens of the state are being trained.

Mr. Churchill was listened to attentively and cheered from time to time for his pointed remarks on the inadequacy of general conditions affecting teachers in Alberta and Saskatchewan.

FOLLOWING the termination of the emergency meeting Mr. Churchill returned to Calgary, where he practices the teaching profession in that city's Central High School.

City Birth Rate Sets New Record

The vital statistics branch of the Alberta government announced today that Edmonton's birth rate in 1946 was the highest in history. The year-end total was 3,062. The previous high was in 1945, when the total reached 4,728.

The death total was higher than the previous year, but lower than the 1944 figure. Officials said 1,436 persons died in Edmonton in 1946, 1,429 in 1945 and 1,488 in 1944.

Marriage figures during the last year were considerably higher than in 1945. The 1946 total was 2,436 as compared with 1,200 year ago.

Nip Crime Wave in Bud

A round of crime planned by a 30-year-old youth from Calgary Creek was stopped in the bud Friday by city detectives.

As a result of information received the police searched a city hotel room where the boy was staying. They found him in possession of a German Lapua pistol and a home-made blackie.

ALSO in the room was a rock full of coins, a set of all-serve and a bank book with the name of Jim Hill on it. In a statement to police the youth said he had intended to kill someone on the head with the blackie and rob him. He further said of how he broke into Jim Hill's home on Canyon Creek on Dec. 27 and stole a suitcase with some articles and the bank book in it.

Then before leaving his home for Edmonton, he took his father's pistol, his mother's all-serve and 40 or 50 dollars from his father's pocket. The blackie he made himself.

Following his apprehension Friday, the youth was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Executive of ATA to Interview Provincial Cabinet

Teachers Ask $1,500 Basic Pay, $50 Pensions

The executive of the Alberta Teachers' Association, headed by H. C. Melness, president, will interview the provincial cabinet at an early date armed with a resolution unanimously approved by more than 200 councillors from all over the province, who demands a basic minimum salary of $1,500 per year for teachers and a retirement pension of $50 per month after 25 years' service.

Terms of the resolution were recited by the resolutions committee following a full-attendance Friday session in the Masonic Temple which recorded the flaring of tempers and the unrestrained hurling of charges involving the department of education, the provincial government, the federal government and almost every agency which in any way was thought responsible for the present teacher shortage, their salary rates and pensions and working conditions.

The salary resolution calls for $1,500 beginning with elementary school teachers, with $300 per year for each additional year of academic training and full credit for previous experience.

FOR SCHOOL teachers, the ATA has also asked for $500 per month per year, one cent for each additional year of teaching. The teacher shortage is an increasing problem and one not seen since 1914.

It is estimated that the ATA has lost 100 teachers in the last 10 years. The loss is estimated at $100 per month after 25 years' experience. The resolution also calls for additional pension benefits on the basis of years of service over 25 years.

Unsettled pension rates of $150 per month payable to teachers as well as for the teacher and pension contributions are also included in the report.

HON. R. E. ANSLY, minister of education, presided at the meeting. He said that the department of education is doing its best to deal with the situation. He said that the department is doing its best to deal with the situation.

He pointed out that there were "hundreds" of teachers in the province who were not getting their salaries. He said that the department is doing its best to deal with the situation.

Boy Scouts Official Plans to Visit City

Figure 1. Aerial view of the study area. The area is divided into three main sections: the northern section (top), the central section (middle), and the southern section (bottom). The northern section is characterized by a large, dark, irregularly shaped area, likely a forest or wetland. The central section is a lighter, more uniform area, possibly a field or a different type of vegetation. The southern section is a darker, more textured area, possibly a forest or a different type of vegetation. The boundary between the northern and central sections is marked by a dashed line. The boundary between the central and southern sections is marked by a solid line. The area is surrounded by a dark, irregularly shaped area, likely a forest or wetland.

THIRD SHOT

As the secretary of the golf club was finishing the course he saw a player driving off about a foot in front of the tee.

"Here," he exclaimed indignantly, "you can't do that! You're disqualified."

"Why," demanded the player, "you're driving off in front of the tee."

"Don't be an idiot," said the secretary, "that's the way you're playing my third shot."

MARMALADE

ONE AFTERNOON the Cook put a dried raisin on to boil. He brought out his tiny rolling pin, a cherry seed of shortening and his pastry board. He put them on the kitchen table and called up the stairs to the Lady of Fashion.

"All ready for you to make those raisin pies," the Cook shouted.

The little lady had just stepped into the kitchen when a great commotion took place outside the kitchen door. The Cook opened the door and there was an orange surrounded by excited Teenie Weenies.

"Look!" puffed the Dunce, his breath rolling out in clouds on the frosty air. "We found an orange back of the grocery and we've got to get it into the house before it freezes."

"You'll never get that orange through the doorway," said the Cook.

"Get an ax," shouted the excited Dunce, "and I'll cut the doorway bigger."

"Wouldn't it be less trouble to cut the orange in two?" asked the Cook. "Anyhow, half the orange will about fill the kitchen and it will make enough marmalade to fill every thimble and hazelnut container we have on the place."

The weather was very cold outside and in order to keep the orange from freezing, the little men worked like beavers cutting the orange in two with a Teenie Weenie crosscut saw. When it was cut the men had a hard time forcing it through the kitchen doorway. The Cook and the Lady of Fashion pushed the kitchen table against the wall to make a place for the orange.

The TEENIE WEEENIES

BY WIM VONARNEY

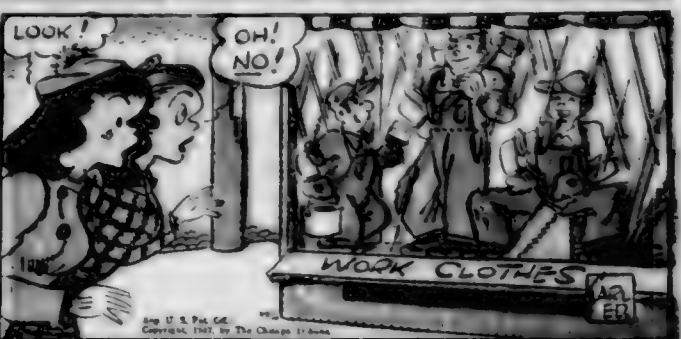

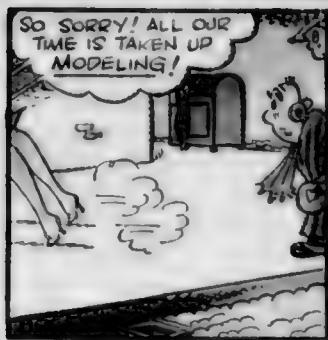

"Boy!" exclaimed the Cowboy. "That sure will make a lot of marmalade."

"Well, we'd better forget the raisin pies and get busy cutting up this orange," the Cook told the Lady of Fashion. "We'll have to get this orange disposed of before we can have supper."

The Cook, the Lady of Fashion and several other Teenie Weenies set to work with Teenie Weenie hatchets, axes and knives, and when they had finished cutting up the orange, every single kettle and thimble—even the last acorn snow basket—had been filled to the top.

Of course there was juice and melted snow all over the place, and the kitchen had to be mopped before supper could be cooked. The Teenie Weenies had a very late supper that night and there was no raisin pie. But during the next few days everything that could be filled was brimming with marmalade, which will make the little people happy for many days to come.
